

SELMA KRONOLD CHURCH WORKER

Noted Prima Donna Has Re-nounced the Stage and Taken Up Her Residence at House on Convent Hill.

Mrs. Selma Kronold, the noted prima donna, has taken up her abode at the gates of the Convent of the Sacred Heart on Convent Hill, and it is not that she is a divorced woman and that her former husband is living she would become a nun. As it is, she has renounced the world and will devote the rest of her life to religious work.

The announcement that Mrs. Kronold has taken her heart on the austere life of a religious will occasion surprise to all except her most intimate friends. For some time the prima donna, though a few years of age, has been a Catholic. Since she was a child she has had a strong leaning toward the Catholic Church. Two years ago she openly renounced her own faith and became a member of the Jesuit Church of St. Ignatius de Loyola, at Eighty-fourth street and Park avenue.

This step was taken immediately after her arrival in this city from Philadelphia, where she obtained a divorce from Jan Koort, the Dutch violinist, to whom she had been married two years. Early last spring she went to live on Convent Hill.

No Religious Vows.

The windows of her little room, as austere in its appointments as the cell of a nun, look out upon the convent grounds, with its ancient trees and its gray walls. Though bound by no religious vows, her life has been regulated almost entirely by the same rigid rules that guide the inmates of the convent.

"We live on sacred grounds here," said the madame, "and the temptation to attend the little convent chapel has grown so strong upon me that I no longer can resist it."

"Yes, I am done with the operatic stage forever, much as that may surprise my friends. In my present frame of mind it would be impossible for me to pursue that career. Few know it, but it is a fact, that when I sang in opera it involved a permanent struggle with my conscience."

"I was brought up in the Roman Catholic convent of St. Thomas in Cracow, Poland, where I was born, and the religious training I received there has clung to me all through life. Consequently I always felt more or less out of place on the operatic stage."

"Stage life and sincere religious conviction do not go hand in hand, and there are many things incidental to it which I did not take very kindly. The result was that many of my associates on the stage were inclined to consider me prudish, and even proud, but that was not the case."

Life's Highest Ambition.

"The highest ambition of my life now would be to renounce the world and spend the rest of my life in a convent."

NOTED PRIMA DONNA, WHO GIVES UP STAGE TO TAKE UP CHURCH WORK.

SELMA KRONOLD
AS "AIDA"

For certain reasons I have not as yet been in a position to realize my fervent longing for this peace that cannot be found in the world, but I still have hopes that I may be able to do so. It would not be correct to state that either last spring or at any other time in the past I had settled this matter in my own mind sufficiently to make the promises or speak the words that would irrevocably bind me to the life of a religious.

Since Mrs. Kronold has not been able to realize her hopes in this direction, she has been considering other plans by which to be useful to the Church. Naturally, her choice fell on a field where her musical and dramatic talents might come into good account. Largely through her efforts, a society, composed of men and women of the Catholic faith with musical and vocal training, and belonging to the Church, has been organized, with a view of producing musical dramas in costume based on Biblical scenes and stories and on Christian legends from lives of the saints.

The society, which is known as the Dramatic Oratorio Society, has some sixty active members who will take part in the productions to be given and a great number of passive members who will contribute financially and otherwise to the work. The society is under the patronage of St. Cecilia and has the approval of Archbishop Farley.

The first, which had gained considerable headway in the meantime, threatened the residence of Charles Whitney Baker, Vice-President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. It was badly scorched. The Ross house was not insured. The damage to Mr. Baker's house is estimated at $5,000.

SEA GATE HOUSE BURNS TO GROUND

The Ross house at Sea Gate, Coney Island, caught fire from a defective gas, and because the pressure in the water pipes was insufficient burned completely down, causing a loss of $25,000. The house, a two-story cottage, was owned by Charles R. Ross, a lumber merchant of New York, and was occupied by Mrs. John Matthews and family who, however, were not at the cottage at the time of the fire.

The fire was discovered by Father J. E. Brophy, of the Church of Our Lady of Grace, Coney Island, who was returning from the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum. He turned in an alarm, but the engines did not reach the scene for at least twenty minutes. Then it was found that there was but one hydrant near enough to be of service and the pressure of the water was scarcely five pounds.

The fire, which had gained considerable headway in the meantime, threatened the residence of Charles Whitney Baker, Vice-President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. It was badly scorched. The Ross house was not insured. The damage to Mr. Baker's house is estimated at $5,000.
